Product Description

Week 4- New Tool Added and Thoughts Before Use

- Fail along the way and → succeed with the end result
- People set goals too low and succeed
- Set sights higher
- Good failure = trying and putting in effort and failing still
- Bad failure = no effort, so failure is because a lack of care
- Do I care?
- How will I improve on the C4 after seeing others and getting feedback?
- Take notes and write down specific things on how to improve when experiencing failure

Tool Description

This week 4 tool allows me to understand the true meaning behind failure. Failure really is not a negative at all, and many people aren't ambitious enough because they fear it. This is the wrong mindset to have. Failure will allow you to get to your goals quicker since you're learning along the way. This tool also reminds me that when I set a goal, I need to care deeply about it and put in all my effort. I can also improve by writing down actionable steps to take.

Thought about how some things maybe I should care more about. How can I care more?

★★★★★ C4 Manifesto

C4 Manifesto:

- This assignment allowed me to reflect on my PB&J; C4 practice. After looking at other C4s in class and hearing feedback, I came up with 6 actionable steps to improve.
- The main issue I had was not choosing boldly. My VOJ took over a lot and stopped me from picking what were probably some of my better ideas. This is because they were ideas that scared me since they would take me way out of my comfort zone. In the next C4, I need to simply pick the best idea based on my convergence questions, not what I would prefer to do.
- I understand the importance of having actionable steps for improvement because that will really give you more clarity on how to be better.
- My email format is also getting more concise and straightforward. I've realized you don't have to pack all the info into the email - that's what the attachments are for.

Personal Best Leadership:

- This assignment allowed me to reflect on what I thought was my best display of leadership. I talked about the time I ran in a Leukemia and Lymphoma Society campaign to raise money for blood cancer awareness.
- We had a very successful campaign; however, I regret certain aspects of it looking back on it. I feel like I really wasn't that great of a leader. Yes, I was able to raise over 10 thousand dollars myself and have a team raise over 100,000 dollars, but I feel like it could have been more. During the start of that campaign was when I was most afraid of other people's judgment. In some ways, I felt embarrassed to run in the campaign and didn't always have the courage to speak to my teammates or share the cause with others. I really wish I had done a better job motivating my teammates and sharing helpful information with them. I simply did the bare minimum rather than putting my fears aside and being a true leader. I feared judgment too much. Looking back, it was really the stupidest thing ever, like, why did I think it was weird for a kid to take part in a great cause? I wish I had a different mindset.
- One thing that did stand out here, though, was my ability to get things done behind closed doors and outwork those around me.

This tool really helped me reflect. It helps me understand what my strengths are and also what my weaknesses are. The tool did a good job identifying those exact things, such as fear or judgment, and fear of leaving the comfort zone. Two things I have to work on to better myself.
